CFAES Community,

Dr. Imed Dami, professor of viticulture in the Department of Horticulture and Crop Science, passed away Saturday night following a battle with colon cancer. Dr. Dami was passionate about improving grape production practices, especially those related to cold stress tolerance. Our thoughts are with Dr. Dami's family, and those in our CFAES community who worked closely with him. Once finalized, Dr. Dami's arrangement information can be found here.

Recent natural disasters and global conflicts remind us how important it is to support one another. Ohio State's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) offers tools and support resources for Ohio State employees, and their families—including dependents, household members, and parents. Learn more. Please take advantage of these resources and continue fostering respect and care in our community.

New career development resources are available to help you plan and shape your career path. University HR has introduced materials to guide you in defining your goals and navigating your career journey. The new framework and tools provide a structured approach to help you plan, manage, and progress your career. Explore these resources through HR Connection to start mapping your future.

Sincerely,
Dean Cathann Kress
