CFAES Community -

What a great celebration this week for the 30th Anniversary of our Ohio State South Centers. South Centers, located in Piketon, provides research and educational support to community leaders, educators, entrepreneurs, and the general public. Through their research and extension programs they promote, develop, and support innovative and profitable enterprises by integrating research and education with an overall goal to sustain the farm, forest, and water resources in southern Ohio. Congratulations to the South Centers team, under the leadership of Tom Worley on 30 years of success, innovation and partnership. If you’d like to learn more about how you could connect with South Centers, visit their website: https://southcenters.osu.edu/home.

We also kicked off our new CFAES STARS (Strategic Alignment for Research Success) Program, a new initiative to identify and develop the next generation of research leaders among early and mid-career tenure track faculty within CFAES. The goal of the STARS Program is to propel emerging research leaders to take their research programs to a higher and more collaborative level. The program will provide participants with the information, skills, and connections they need to assemble and lead large-scale teams in the pursuit of major extramural funding.

And finally, congratulations to Brian Roe, who will serve as a co-principal investigator on a $15 million NSF grant along with four colleagues from American University, Johns Hopkins University, Morgan State University, and the Rochester Institute of Technology. The project, Multiscale RECIPES for Sustainable Food Systems, officially kicks off on Oct. 1. RECIPES is short for Resilient, Equitable, and Circular Innovations With Partnership and Education Synergies.

Be well.
